 [Historical Note on Norfolk Island and New Zealand:
 (1788) Norfolk Island was settled from Sydney, later abandoned, later re-settled as a 'place of secondary punishment', subject to the government of NSW and (from 1836) the bishop of Australia.
 (1840) when transportation to NSW ceased, it continued to Van Diemen's Land [Tasmania] until 1853.
 (1840) Norfolk Island (remaining as a penal settlement) came under Tasmanian colonial jurisdiction and (1842) after the creation of the diocese of Tasmania under the bishop of Tasmania.
 (1856) GA SELWYN tried to buy land on Norfolk island as the base for the incipient Melanesian mission. Sir William DENISON the governor of NSW and governor general of the Australian colonies (the latter office being titular only and ceasing in 1861) objected to SELWYN's proposal because he did not want Norfolk Island to be the centre of SELWYN's Melanesian mission – he referred to 'the influence of the savage Melanesians on Mr NOBBS' carefully-guarded and child-like flock' of people of mixed-European race.
 (1866) under his successor Sir John YOUNG the Melanesian mission did purchase land on Norfolk island:
 (1867) Norfolk island was the headquarters for the missionary diocese of Melanesia, and thus part of the Anglican province of New Zealand.
 (1913) administration of Norfolk island was transferred from the NSW state to the Australian federal government.
 (1919) after the headquarters of the diocese of Melanesia moved from S Barnabas Norfolk islands to the Solomons, the parish of Norfolk island continued to be staffed by chaplains appointed by the diocese of Melanesia. Over many years the financial support by the local residents for their parish priest was insufficient; this settler parish was thus a burden on the missionary diocese of Melanesia.
 (05 Aug 1938) Norfolk island was formally transferred to the diocese of Sydney, and thus the Anglican church of Australia. (269;111)

27 Jan 1896 obituary The Times

Note: *but the full reasons are provided in a letter of the Revd Joshua JONES to F de Jersey CLERE, in congratulations on the latter's appointment as diocesan architect: 'misunderstanding with the Bishop from whom, LEECH complained, that he had received such a reprimand as he had not experienced since he left school. His stipend (only £150 per annum) was left unpaid though the District had raised and sent down enough to pay it. He wrote: on further enquiry he found that the arrears dated back to [John Lloyd] KEATING's time, and had not been allowed to interfere with the regular payment of [CARUS] WILSON's stipend in the meantime; that he had 'written temperately to the bishop and got a rocket back': LEECH with relief accepted the offer from Sydney, renewing an offer he had declined two months earlier; problem of 'KEATING's American ideas of finance, and they [local people] complain that 'the church is a byword for its frequent changes [ie of clergy] and general unsatisfactoriness'; that they 'lay the chief blame of their misfortunes on [RJ] THORPE', in which they only partially make out their case; 'low regard THORPE is held generally now', noting the 'freedom of TOWGOOD and LEECH about THORPE'. LEECH a personal friend of THORPE previously 'now says he [THORPE] is weak-minded, unpractical and incorrigibly meddlesome ... morally crooked ... intriguing to make himself bishop; that [Arthur] 'STOCK thinks the bishopric is his by right upon next voidance', that he 'does not help cordiality between the existing or the two expectant bishops'. Bishop [HADFIELD] is 'chiefly at fault by yielding to THORPE in sending up the 1st scamp [CARUS WILSON] and then an invalid' [LEECH]. 'As to the first of these, the last news is that he [CARUS WILSON] returned to England in the BRITISH QUEEN, that he went ashore in Rio and got very drunk and came back to the ship and thrashed his wife'. (See papers of Octavius HADFIELD in the ATL, MS-Papers-0668)

Other

1910-1940 Brotherhood of S Paul Bardfield Essex was an amorphous group founded by the Revd Edward MEARS and set up in his rectory at Little Bardfield. He accepted for ordination training candidates unacceptable to the bishops of the Church of England; he with assistance from sons and friends, prepared 300 men for ordination. A few colonial bishops (particularly Arthur CHERRINGTON of Waikato) desperate for more clergy would accept and ordain these men.
The college did persist into the 1950s, but without recognition or funding from the church of England, and with consistently adverse assessments of the calibre of its students and their training. John Garland de Quincey MEARS and two brothers were even latterly trustees of the college, when it spent its last days in the vicarage of Great Snoring near Walsingham. (pers comm. Professor Ken Cable 1994; See Reverence My Sanctuary, Guide to S Katharine, Little Bardfield, by Robert Beakin;8)
Jack MEARS was friendly with Fr Conrad NOEL of Thaxted and his political loyalties became Socialist

Nov 1845 the Revd John MILNER elected mayor of Appleby Westmorland

Jun 1846 Oxford Herald : the Revd John MILNER BA of Queen's College Oxford publicly received into the Roman Catholic church; this further 'succession to Rome has caused great sorrow in Oxford university' – however though possible this looks unlikely for the Revd John MILNER BA deacon was ordained priest by the bishop of Carlisle later that same year. However in 1846 the Revd Henry James MILNER MA Cambridge and rector of Penrith Cumberland was received into the RC church (see GORMAN, Converts to Rome)

1848-1851 chaplain on HMS HAVANNAH flagship Australian Royal Navy station

Mar 1850-and on other port calls, services S Paul Wellington diocese New Zealand

Jul 1850 in Sydney the Revd John MILNER chaplain HMS HAVANNAH and the Revd WB CLARKE of St Leonards were pelted with mud and stones and hooted at by a mob of boys and men; they 'were indebted for this treatment to the circumstance that we wore "black hats" ' (South Australian Adelaide 23 Jul 1850) (William Branwhite CLARKE died c1878, memorial window S Thomas church St Leonards NSW)

Feb 1852 as he left HMS HAVANNAH his license was withdrawn by the bishop of Sydney (BROUGHTON) as slanders had not been refuted at the time they were made against him promised a license to preach diocese Sydney and was tacitly allowed to do so until such license was granted but reports prejudicial to his character were in circulation and he relinquished his ministry. MILNER took action against the one person who was accusing him who then said he was misinformed and retracted his slanders. Captain ERSKINE and the officers all denied the alleged imputations against MILNER. The bishop of Sydney (BROUGHTON) did not proceed with the investigation as he accepted the charges were retracted. He had been licensed and performed at Christ Church S Andrews, and Parramatta;

Jul 1852 the Revd John MILNER arrived NSW WATERLILY

1852-1853 assistant master The King's school Parramatta

01 Mar 1854 late of Coalflat Hall Orton, educated Appleby school, appointed principal of the Collegiate Institute Sydney NSW (Manchester Examiner) - however: A O MORIARTY claimed that he did not remember him later at the King's school Parramatta (Sydney Morning Herald 26 Jul 1912); however Mr F E ROGERS QC stated he was educated at MILNER's school in Sydney (Illustrated Sydney News 24 Jun 1893)

Aug 1854 Sir Alfred STEPHEN (at the marriage of whose son MILNER had officiated Christ Church Sydney) supported MILNER, and Captain ERSKINE restored him to Royal Navy chaplaincy on the ORION (Sydney Morning Herald;111;204)

1855 appointed by the Admiralty, chaplain HMS ORION (7)

1855 awarded Crimea medal

09 Jul 1855 Sydney Morning Herald: Captain ERSKINE now of the ORION line-of-battle ship, 'has lifted the cloud so long over' MILNER; he appointed 'the injured gentleman' chaplain to the ORION; MILNER had been driven from NSW colony a ruined man, and his license refused notwithstanding every effort by his friends who almost despaired of justice being done to him. He was 'the victim of a vicious ecclesiastical system by official mistake or by official infallibility and now resumes the duties of his sacred calling... He has been protected by the favour of the Admiralty and not by the Church.'

1856 through the Revd J MILNER Appleby Westmoreland gave £1.14.11 for the Soldiers' Infant

 [Historical Note on Norfolk Island and New Zealand:
 (1788) Norfolk Island was settled from Sydney, later abandoned, later re-settled as a 'place of secondary punishment', subject to the government of NSW and (from 1836) the bishop of Australia.
 (1840-1853) on cessation to NSW, transportation of convicts continued to Van Diemen's Land [Tasmania]
 (1840) Norfolk Island (remaining as a penal settlement) came under Tasmanian colonial jurisdiction and (1842) after the creation of the diocese of Tasmania under the bishop of Tasmania.
 (1856) GA SELWYN tried to buy land on Norfolk island as the base for the incipient Melanesian mission. Sir William DENISON the governor of NSW and governor general of the Australian colonies (the latter office being titular only and ceasing in 1861) objected to SELWYN's proposal because he did not want Norfolk Island to be the centre of SELWYN's Melanesian mission – he referred to 'the influence of the savage Melanesians on Mr NOBBS' carefully-guarded and child-like flock'.
 (1862) first confirmation service of JC PATTESON on Norfolk island, with the consent of the bishop of

Tasmania in whose diocese Norfolk island continued officially to remain
 (1866) under his successor Sir John YOUNG the Melanesian mission did purchase land on Norfolk island:
 (1867) Norfolk island was the headquarters for the missionary diocese of Melanesia, and thus part of the Anglican province of New Zealand.
 (1913) administration of Norfolk island transferred from the NSW state to the Australian federal government
 (1919) after the headquarters of the diocese of Melanesia moved to the Solomons, the parish of Norfolk island continued to be staffed by chaplains appointed by the diocese of Melanesia.
 (05 Aug 1938) Norfolk island was formally transferred to the diocese of Sydney, and thus the Anglican church of Australia. (269;111)
