Dear Parishioners of St Mary's,—

November is the "Month of Holy Souls,"—souls who have left their bodies and gone through the gate of death, souls who await the Last Great Day when they shall be clothed about with their resurrection bodies, souls who treasure still their spiritual faculties of understanding, memory and will.

Now most of these holy souls have reached their final resting place,—heaven itself. They are in heaven after undergoing any needed purification in purgatory. They are in heaven because on their earthly pilgrimage they have striven to fulfill God's will in answering the call to holiness. They are in heaven because the merits of their Saviour King of Heaven have been applied to their souls to make up for any demerits in their lives here on earth as they failed now and then in the midst of temptation. In heaven they are in the presence of the Beatific Vision,—God in three Persons, Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Him they adored here on earth even though they could see Him but "through a glass darkly." Now they see Him face to face, so to speak, and appreciate Him in proportion to the depth of their own spiritual lives as lived while on earth. Some of the holy souls in heaven, the saints in glory, were so well-known on earth that Mother Church has canonized them and kept them as well-known before the minds of the faithful still on this earth. Most of them, however, are unknown to us mortals and so the Church bids us commemorate these on the Feast of All Saints.

Very many of the holy souls are in purgatory awaiting their final reward in heaven. There after the comparative darkness of this world they are being accustomed to greater and greater light in preparation for the blinding light of heaven itself. There they are at last at rest from the labor of meeting temptation, at rest from the battle of life. There they are being cleansed from the deep stains left on them by their sins. There they are paying a share in the just penalty for those sins by being deprived of heaven itself for some space. But heaven happily is their assured goal,—assured by Jesus who on the Cross answered for them. For these holy souls in purgatory Mother Church offers her Requiems at which those of us here on earth accept the privilege as well as duty of praying for their happy progress. We begin such praying on All Souls' Day and continue it at many a Requiem offered in this 'Month of Holy Souls.' On All Souls' Day we commemorate all the faithful departed, naming none any more than we name the saints on All Saints' Day. At the Requiems spread throughout the month we love tenderly to remember by name our beloved dead.

Who of us can fail to rejoice with the saints in glory and beg their prayers? Who of us can neglect that spiritual work of mercy, namely, praying for the dead? Not one, I hope.

Affectionately,

THE KNOW-HOW IN CATHOLIC LIVING
How to Prepare for a Good Death

The question of utmost importance for us all is not where we shall die or when we shall die but how we shall die. Shall we die in fear or in hope? Shall we die in darkness of sin or in light of virtue? Shall we die alone, or in the company of our blessed Redeemer and the holy angels and the saints? Shall we die as saved or as damned? Shall we die like Christians or like pagans? Shall we die like animals or like spiritual beings capable of union with God?

Now death is not the end of all things but a wonderful beginning. Right now our lives are carrying us toward the ocean of Eternity where the destiny we have made for ourselves will not be destroyed but rather completed for good or bad. In a very real sense every one of us is the architect of his own future. Not without meaning are those words of blessed Paul, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." It does rest with us in some measure to make our future an eternity of either joy or of sorrow, of either bliss or of pain. In the few short years of our earthly pilgrimage we actually decide whether we are to pass eternity in joy or in hopeless misery. True Our Lady and the saints intercede for us in our daily round and our friends support us by their prayers, yet no one saves our souls but ourselves. But you say, "Is Calvary of no effect?" Saint Augustine reminds us ever so truly, "God has redeemed thee without thyself but He will not save thee without thyself." In other words, heaven and hell are right now in the balance. None of us will be sent to hell except he who willfully turns away from grace and salvation. And none of us will be sent to heaven unless he willfully turns toward heaven's King, Jesus Himself, and uses His Church and her sacraments so as to gain strength to do His will and hearken to His word. You see, preparation for a good death does rest with us.

There are those truly pitiful individuals who fear death to such an extent that they will not even speak of it or consider it as something for which to prepare. Such individuals are filled with fear at the very remote thought even of the severance of their soul from its constant companion, the body. They think of the wearing down of the body, with the possibility of an exceedingly painful catastrophic end. They dread the thought of leaving behind their earthly possessions and the companions of their earthly life.

When the angel of death came for the soul of Saint Hilariou, this holy man exclaimed, "I have served a good Master for these seventy years. Why should I be afraid to go and see Him?" This is the point, is it not? I have served. Herein is our preparation for a good death,—Christian service. If we live day by day by making our life a continual death, that is, death to sin and all inordinate attachment to created things and to ourselves, then in His mercy Jesus will change our death when it comes into a life of future glory.

Shall we fearlessly acquire the habit of saying to ourselves each night as we drift into sleep, that symbol of death, “I shall one day die”? Yes, I shall die and leave everything, without exception. I shall take leave of my family and my friends. I shall depart from my home and from all that belongs to me. What are these things to which I am most attached? Why not separate myself from them ahead of time in the spirit of detachment? True, my soul will leave my body which my friends will get rid of as soon as convenient. What will become of these hands and feet, this head? Soon they will be dust of which I have been lovingly warned each Ash Wednesday. What a fool I am to spend so much of my time and money in flattering and adorning that which will soon be dust. At my death I shall see myself at last in the bright light of God’s love. I shall answer for my whole life before God my merciful yet just Judge. Oh, let me sit in judgment on myself more severely while I am still on pilgrimage here that I may have no time or inclination to sit in judgment on my fellowmen whose souls after all are naked only to God.

You see if we will grow in holy fear of spiritual death, we need have no fear of natural death but rather look forward to it as a wonderful gate leading to glory. We sing of our blessed Lord in the great Te Deum “When thou hadst overcome the sharpness of death, thou didst open the Kingdom of Heaven to all believers.” Indeed, Christ has overcome the sharpness of death. He has taken away its terror by His own death and resurrection. It is no longer a sudden halt in a great advance or an unnatural break in an orderly progress, but rather a next step in this progress. A saintly bishop once told of visiting a dying child who was terrified at the approach of death. Said the bishop to the child “If I took you in my arms and carried you out into the next room, you would not be afraid, would you?” “Oh no,” said the boy, “of course I should not be afraid of that.” “Well,” said the bishop, “that is just what it is to die. It is the Lord Jesus who will come and take you in His arms and carry you into the next room.” Now for all of us Christ has taken away the cloud of mystery encircling death. Formerly men spoke of a far land from which no traveler ever returned. Christ, however, did return and told His followers that death was just a going home to the Father and that actually the earthly country is more strange than the heavenly country since in the latter there is an abiding home for which the faithful are lovingly made and eternally destined.

Are you afraid to meet Jesus as you go through the gate of death? Think then of His treatment of Mary Magdalene and of that denier Saint Peter. Think of His parable of the Prodigal Son. Think too of His treatment of the Penitent Thief on Calvary. You see, full though we may be of wickedness and hypocrisy before death, we are not going to stand before abstract goodness or abstract truth but before Christ Himself. We shall appear before Him who has been patient with us and led us into green pastures and discipled us lovingly and taught us hopefully. We shall appear before Him who so strengthened the dying Stephen that he bravely plunged into the red sea of blood of martyrdom and became the first Christian martyr. We shall appear before Him who has been near each dying servant from the very hour of His death on the Cross.

Can you imagine anyone being afraid to meet Christ? Let each of us prepare to receive and enthrone Him in our next communion. This is the truest preparation for death, yes, frequent preparation for frequent communion. This is why our goal at length should be daily communion. What matters it if we meet Jesus at the altar here or at the gate of death? For those who strive to die daily to sin, either becomes the gate of heaven.

NO TEARS FOR DEATH

I shed no tears for death.
My lonely heart,
Braced to eternity’s winds,
Stands at salute.
Across vast wastes a breath,
Of grandeur part,
Blows on my soul and rescinds
Flesh rendered mute.
My tears are shed for life.
I cringe to see
Tenderness scorned and betrayed,
Beauty disowned.
Why mourn when death’s keen knife
Shall cut us free?
Fallen the idols we made,
Love is enthroned!

OUR LORD (11)

ALTHOUGH the Council of Ephesus in 431 had settled the theological question of Nestorianism — the doctrine that there were two separate persons in our Lord — there were still many who held to some form of this doctrine. And the great fear of the more than 450 bishops that were assembled at Chalcedon in 451 was that some elements of this error might remain in the Church. So, while it was their original intention simply to affirm the traditional faith of the Church as set forth by the Fathers and at the Councils of Nicea (325) and Constantinople (381), they soon found that it was necessary to draw up a new and more careful and explicit Definition of their own on the doctrine of the Incarnation.

They did this by first considering the Tome of Leo (the letter of the Pope which we spoke of in Article 10). There were a few who feared that this letter contained elements of Nestorianism; but after it was interpreted and explained by the papal legates present, the Council accepted it as orthodox and used it as the basis of its own Definition along with the Synodical Letters of St. Cyril (Patriarch of Alexandria at the time of the Council of Ephesus).

The introduction to the Definition says: "(The Council) opposes those who would rend the mystery of the dispensation into a duad of Sons; it repels from the sacred assembly those who dare to say that the godhead of the Only begotten is capable of suffering; it resists those who imagine there is a mixture or confusion in the two natures of Christ; it drives away those who fancy His form as a servant is of an heavenly or of some substance other than that which was taken of us, and it anathematizes those who foolishly talk of two natures of our Lord before the union, conceiving that after the union there was only one."

Having cleared the ground of some of the most important errors, it goes on to say: "Following the holy Fathers, we all with one voice teach men to confess that (1) the Son and our Lord Jesus Christ is one and the same, (2) that He is perfect in godhead and perfect in manhood, truly God and truly man, of a reasonable soul and body, (3) consubstantial with His Father as touching His godhead, and consubstantial with us as to His manhood, in all things like unto us, without sin; (4) begotten of His Father before all worlds according to His godhead; (5) but in these last days for us and for our salvation of the Virgin Mary, the Mother of God, according to His manhood, (6) one and the same Christ, Son, Lord, only begotten Son, in two natures, unconfusedly, immutably, indivisibly, inseparably; (7) the distinction of natures being preserved and concurring in one person and hypostasis, not separated or divided into two persons, but one and the same Son and Only begotten, God the Word, the Lord Jesus Christ, as the prophets from the beginning have spoken concerning Him, and as the Lord Jesus Christ himself has taught us, and as the creed of the Fathers has delivered us." There follows the condemnation and deposition of those who teach any other faith whether clerics or laymen.

As noted in the above Definition, the following points are made:
(1) The unity of our Lord. He is only one person, not two. (2) The perfection of His two natures. In the Incarnation nothing is lost from either of His natures. He is God in the same sense as the Father is, with all the divine attributes. He is man in the same sense that we are, with all the human attributes, including a reasonable soul (against the Apollinarians), and a material, physical body (against the Gnostics and Docetists). So he is properly called both truly God and truly man.

(3) The term, consubstantial, is the same as the phrase that appears in the Nicene Creed at Mass, "of one substance with the Father." This point reinforces Point 2, that He is truly God and truly man. Also the Council takes note here that man in his perfection (before the Fall) is without sin. Therefore, our Lord is without sin, since his manhood is perfect as is his godhead. (4) The eternity and absoluteness of His Godhead is expressed by this phrase, "begotten of His Father before all worlds," which also comes from the Nicene Creed. He is not God in any subordinate sense (as the Arians taught), but His godhead is true and complete. (5) His manhood is not eternal, but was created at the Annunciation and was derived from his Mother. She is here called Mother of God — the phrase which the Nestorians hated — because He is truly God as well as man, yet only one person; and the Virgin Mary is Mother of that Person. To deny that she is Mother of God would be to deny either that He is truly God; or to deny the oneness of His person. This denial of oneness is what the Nestorians were getting at.

Would you like to become a Friend of Saint Mary's? The only requirements are, first, prayer for God's blessing on Saint Mary's and, second, an annual thank offering at the Patronal Feast, December the eighth. If you have said "It is a source of encouragement to me to know that Saint Mary's is always there," here is your chance to encourage that which encourages you. Write Father Taber today and receive your membership card.
