My dear People:

As usual, this letter is being written well in advance of the actual date indicated, with the intention that on the feast of Mary’s nativity, or as close to it as is possible, this issue of AVE will already have found its way into your home.

And while you are reading this, if indeed it is the 8th of September, the author of this epistle will be finding himself as a guest at the great Benedictine Abbey of St. Peter at Solesmes in France. It is a place which I have visited several times before, and for those of us whose interest lies in the preserving of Gregorian Chant it is a spot where liturgy and music combine to create worship that is unsurpassed anywhere else in the world.

There is a young monk at Solesmes whose name is Gregory Casprini. Father Gregory is an American, he comes from Bayside in Queens, not far from here, and as a young music student with no religious affiliation he was brought to St. Mary’s over a decade ago to hear our music and to experience our worship. The result was his baptism here during that same time period, after which he took a trip to France, in the course of which he made his first visit to Solesmes. Ten years later Father is a member of that Order, he is a priest of the Holy Roman Church, and on his occasional visits to his parents in New York he always includes a moment of prayer and reflection in the church within whose walls he received for the first time the renewing grace of the Christian life. My visit to Solesmes will provide a moment of quiet during my own holiday this summer. It will be the first time that I will actually have resided in the monastery there, it will give me an opportunity to practice my meager French, and most importantly of all it will afford me a participation in the daily routine of one of the great monastic communities of the Western Church. That in itself will have been worth the whole trip!
And it occurs to me, in these post-General Convention days of this summer of '88, that the reality of Christian life is far more apparent in our daily routine of worship and praise than it will ever be in synods or Church conventions of any kind. I remind myself of this as we prepare in New York for our Special Convention of September 27th, at which time we shall presumably elect a Bishop Coadjutor to serve in this diocese. Certainly Catholic Anglicans are well aware already of the reduced role that seems to be ours within official Church circles these days. And that role is small indeed where the current episcopal election is concerned. Certainly at stake in the days immediately ahead is the question of what it means to be a Catholic Anglican in our time. Does it mean liturgically that we are devotees of forms of worship that have ceased to exist within the mainstream of Western Catholic practice? Or does it mean in the same context that we are avid participants in every nuance of liturgical renewal? Does Rome sneeze, and do we Catholic Anglicans simply say ‘Gesundheit’? Do we take our stand on Rite I or on Rite II, or better yet on the Prayer Book of 1928? Does God himself speak to us in the language of Elizabeth I, or does the truth of the matter lie in God’s preference for a contemporary idiom, and that idiom void of sex or gender?

But carried further, and certainly looked at from within the sacramental basis of our Church’s life, does being a Catholic Anglican mean an utter and total rejection of any participation by women within the Apostolic Ministry of the Catholic Church? For some of us it does. But for many there is an openness to female sharing in the pastoral ministry of the diaconate, and most of us have long forgotten the role of Bishop Pike in leading our Church to a recognition that the ancient Order of Deaconesses is inherently a part of the diaconate itself. And in some instances indeed, being a Catholic Anglican these days is entirely compatible with accepting the presence of women within the sacred priesthood and, by definition, within the episcopate as well. Put in its proper theological sequence, and because the priesthood is in fact a participation in the full sacramental reality of the episcopate, those who have received the gift of priestly ordination are themselves susceptible to the gift of episcopal ordination within the Catholic tradition. Those of you who know this parish realize that even here opinions are divided on this issue. Those of you who know this diocese can assure yourselves that a woman candidate will find her name submitted among those from whom we will be choosing in our New York diocesan election this fall.

From my own vantage point I am tired to death of the time and emotions that have been spent on the Ordination issue within the Episcopal Church during the past decade. I am a conservative in this matter, and I am sure that I shall continue to maintain a traditional stance in this regard for the foreseeable future. I also do not have final answers to this issue. What I do know is that primacy of conscience exacts absolute and total respect wherever conscience is employed, and I do not believe that the passage or failure of resolutions in a General Convention can mitigate our obligation in this regard in any way. And conscience must always be obeyed. Before the present chapter of our Church’s history is finished many decisions of conscience will have to be made. For those of us who have valued an older priestly ideal, those decisions may seem radical indeed. And for those of us who are pastors, our obligation to souls entrusted to our care will not be easily laid aside. But conscience carries its own validity, and my respect for others must be as genuine as that which I demand of them.

And so I must draw this letter to its close. This parish, this diocese, and indeed the Episcopal Church, will look very differently to me from within the experience of a timeless worship and monastic stability. I shall be praying for our Church. I shall be praying for this diocese. And this parish will be with me during every moment of my time away. Join me in my prayer, if you will. Join me in my desire to be faithful, to be loyal, and to adhere to that which is true.

With my love in Christ,

Faithfully yours,

Edgar F. Wells

This summer once again St. Mary's has been host to another seminarian from the United Kingdom who has come to take part in our parish life. Andrew Davis hails from the Diocese of Portsmouth, he is a student at Edinburgh Theological College, and the following address describes his experience in our midst.

As some of you may know, I am a seminarian from England, studying for the ministry in Scotland and spending six weeks in the heat and hassle of New York City.

I have two aims this morning: to share something of my own personal pilgrimage (which the Rector has asked me to do) and at the same time, to say something about today's readings (which the Rector did not ask me to do!). I don't think these two things are totally unrelated. When I noticed that today's Gospel was about going away to a "lonely place" and I thought of myself having travelled from a tiny English village to New York City, I had to laugh.

The Epistle is more encouraging - it speaks of Christ preaching to those who were far off and to those who were near. Through Him we both have access in one Spirit to the Father - whether English or American; whether in Portsmouth, Edinburgh, or New York City or anywhere at all. The Gospel of Christ speaks to all people at all times and in all places.

Of course, we are addressed by God in many different ways. Until I came here, most of my Christian experience was of a "lower" variety than what is gloriously present here. I believe Fr. Lang called St. Mary's a "Cathedral of Anglo-Catholicism". Being in a church which expresses its faith and worship like this one is important for me for two main reasons: Firstly, because it feels to me more comprehensive than that which I have previously been used to. What I mean is, there has to be a place in our worship of God for silence, stillness, tears and sadness, and the expression of pain. It's very wrong to categorize, but it seems to me that "evangelical" worship is able to celebrate resurrection, but seems often to be almost EMBARRASSED about the sight of a despised and rejected Jew, friend of the outcast and broken, nailed naked in great agony to two pieces of crossed wood. In fact, it wasn't until I attended the Good Friday liturgy at the Community of The Resurrection in Mirfield, England that I realised that it was alright to be struck dumb before the Cross, alright to feel desolate and powerless - and alright just to cry....Christianity is about recognising our fragility and humanity, about gazing in mute silence, about feeling helpless.
Last Friday, I sat with a young mother from Harlem in St. Luke's hospital. She is dying of AIDS. She is terrified of death, she is terrified of what will happen to her 11 and 15 year old children. She has no money and no relatives. There was nothing I could do but hold her hand and cry with her. And I feel that it is important to acknowledge this pain and helplessness in worship. Yes, we love God and Yes, we see that love in the Cross. But Jesus Christ WAS crucified; and others are crucified every minute of every day in this extraordinary city. We need to acknowledge that fact in worship and our sacramental life. Only then, it seems to me, have we any right at all to hope for resurrection and to express joy in the liturgy of Easter.

Secondly, I think it is important I am here from the standpoint of my own personal spirituality. Prior to last year, if I'm really honest with you, I was more aware of the priestly vocation than I was aware of God. If that sounds bad, I'm sorry but that's me. I felt LED, let's say, but I wasn't sure by WHAT or by WHOM. I was a "card-carrying liberal". I felt SOMETHING; I felt the presence of active, creative love in my life and I saw the Incarnation - the Divine and human coming gloriously together - as crucial, as true and as in some way reaching out to embrace me. But it wasn't until a particular course of events last year that I realised how different things can be and how gracious is the God we worship.

I had made friends with a wonderful woman; but a woman trapped in her own depressive past which had, at one stage led to her inflicting knife wounds on herself. As this friend began to sink down, I suddenly gave up saying to her, "There, there, it'll be alright" and thought "Why don't I have the courage of my convictions?". After all, I AM training for the priesthood. Why don't we pray together? We did so and something very changed and very profound happened. It was as if the Spirit of God filled the room and my friend was shown her own glory - shown something of Our Lord's love for her and shown something of HIS presence in HER past.

For four months after that my own prayer life was changed with a new vitality and presence and I regularly felt a strong sense of God praying "within" me. I hope this does not all sound too glib or trite - you are probably as sick as I am of "the Lord came into my life" stories ("Oh, hasn't He come into yours yet?") - I must say I am still baffled, confused and awestruck by the whole thing.

After four months, this burst of what I can only call charismatic activity came to an end, leaving two legacies: a need for stillness, silence and contemplation — and a state in which I found the Mass almost unbearably moving.

I feel I NEED the stillness, the holiness of your tradition and the COMPLETENESS of your Eucharistic worship. I cannot really say more than that at the moment. But much of what happens in this church makes me feel at home in a very special way.

I have no doubt that many of you have reasons why St. Mary's is important to you — and you will also have had important experiences in your life in which you have been aware of God speaking to you. Whatever our backgrounds, God has BEEN THERE. Wherever we are NOW, God is with us. However we choose to worship and to approach Him, He opens wide his arms for us, as He did on the Cross.

Today's readings express that constancy of love — they tell us that whether Catholic or Evangelical, male or female, Jew or Greek, slave or free — we ARE all one. Reconciliation has been achieved — it is up to us to recognise that: "You are no longer strangers and sojourners, but you are fellow citizens with the saints and members of the Household of God".

In the same way that those 5,000 people, fed on the hillside in today's Gospel were there for very different reasons, from very different backgrounds, many of them not understanding at all what was going on; so WE all gather here today — with different expectations and understandings — but Our Lord comes to us and feeds us. It matters little HOW we respond, but simply THAT we respond. HOW we choose to respond, what form that response takes, is of course important — but it is a response to victory ALREADY won, reconciliation ALREADY achieved.

Thank you for the chance to RESPOND WITH YOU to the grace and the love that transcends all barriers of denomination, tradition, class, race and sex. As a wise priest I know once said, "The important thing about our Christian faith is that we cannot ever grasp our redemption, because our redemption grasps US". And I am just revelling in the chance to join in your celebration of that redemption that Christ won for us.

LAY MINISTRIES AT ST. MARY'S

SAINT MARY'S GUILD
Sacred vessels and vestments are cared for by men and women working together on assigned weekends each month, and at other specified times. Of special importance is the restoration of older vestments in the parish. To volunteer, please contact one of the clergy.

THE CURSILLO COMMUNITY
A group of men and women dedicated to the building of Christian community within our parish life. Members meet weekly at various convenient times for the purpose of sharing their experience of the Christian life in small groups, and come together monthly as a larger body for common worship, adoration, and the sharing of Christian fellowship. In the strictest sense this is not a parish organization but a movement of spiritual depth, grounded in the principles and teaching of Catholic Renewal in our own day. All parishioners are welcome.

SAINT VINCENT'S GUILD
Acolytes' Guild for men serving at Sunday and weekday services. Those interested should speak to the clergy. Guild members occasionally serve as Readers as well.

SAINT RAPHAEL'S GUILD
Ushers at parish services: Sunday mornings and evenings, and on Feast days. Interested persons, men and women, should contact Emil Denworth at (718) 263-6385.

SAINT MARTIN'S GUILD
Tours of the church are conducted after Sunday Solemn Mass, and Guild members are trained for this special ministry. If interested, please phone Philip Parker at 582-0807.

BROTHER LAWRENCE GUILD
Hosts and Hostesses in charge of refreshments after Solemn Mass on Sundays and Feast days, and at special parish meals. Interested persons should phone George Blackshire at (718) 858-5797.
